Sir Terence English

My next dilemma was whether to try to contact Norman Browse to appraise him of the change in plan. I decided against this initially as I felt you would prefer to do this yourself. I then spoke to Stewart Hunter and Jarda Stark and outlined the movements. They were both totally supportive of the second line of action. Yesterday, Keith contacted me again, offering to try to speak with Norman Browse when he is available, to bring him up to date with these developments. I have not heard from Malliday about the outcome of Tuesday's Advisory Committee Meeting.

I am sorry to write at such length. I have tried to act in the best interests of the College and the Working Party, and in view of Monday August 3rd's meeting with the British Paediatric Cardiac Association in London. This is a contentious issue and I hope you will understand my actions in your absence.

My best regards.

Yours sincerely

David I Hamilton
